2014 has been a particularly bad year for air travel, not in terms of crashes but in terms of fatalities with 1,158 people killed in plane accidents, making it the worst year since 2005. In the latest crash, all 162 passengers of AirAsia flight QZ8501 perished.

The plane accident which caught the most attention was without a doubt the shoot down of Malaysia Airlines Flight MH17, given its relation to the conflict in Ukraine. Without evidence, Washington has accused the Donbass militia supported by Moscow of having downed the aircraft.

What Ukrainians experienced in 2014 was the continuity of the 2004 Orange Revolution, another “color revolution” piloted by Washington, but this time with the help of neo-Nazis, a fact which has been the object of a complete media blackout when not discredited as “Kremlin propaganda”.

Here are the most important articles published on Ukraine and the shoot-down of MH17.
