

Another False Flag? Skripal's Black Persian Cat. Russia Did It?

Satire in a Fabricated World: Public Opinion Polls on Skripals Black Persian Killed and Two Guinea Pigs Found Dead

By Bassim al-Khalili

Global Research, April 07, 2018

Region: Europe

Theme: Media Disinformation

The latest case pertains to Russia's double agent spy's Black Persian Cat that was secretly put down together with two guinea pigs found dead at Sergei Skripal's home after the alleged poison attack.

Below is the statement of the Russian Embassy:

"Shortly after the Russian Embassy in London posed the question on what happened to the animals that Sergey Skripal kept in his Salisbury house, the British side said, first in an unnamed leak and then as a DEFRA comment [Her Majesty's Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs]:

"when a vet was able to access the property, two guinea pigs had sadly died. A cat was also found in a distressed state and a decision was taken by a veterinary surgeon to euthanize the animal to alleviate its suffering".

Department
for Environment
Food & Rural Affairs

Pet travel: entering/returning to the UK

Get your dog microchipped

Rural grants and payments

Bringing food, animals, plants into UK

Carrier bags: why there's a charge

This is, however, the sort of answer that brings about still more questions. Regarding the dead guinea pigs and the malnourished cat, it is said unofficially that they were taken to the Porton Down facility and incinerated there.

But it remains unclear if their remains were ever tested for toxic substances, which would constitute useful evidence, and if not, why such a decision was made. The fact that the animals were locked inside the house for several days suggests that the police did not access the alleged crime scene, which would be very unusual for such a high profile investigation. Such treatment of pets is also hardly consistent with UK laws on animal cruelty and comes as a blatant disregard for Mr. Skripal's rights as the owner and companion of the animals. Overall it has been difficult to avoid the impression that the animals have been disposed of as an inconvenient piece of evidence. It is also to be noted that according to Mr. Skripal's niece there were 2 cats not one in the house — and the whereabouts of the second are still unknown." (emphasis added) (see complete Russian Embassy statement in screenshot below)

06.04.2018

Embassy Press Officer's comment on the DEFRA statement regarding the fate of Sergey Skripal's pets

Q: Do you have a comment on the Department for Environment, Food, and Rural Affairs statement regarding the fate of Sergey Skripal's pets?

A: Shortly after we posed the question on what happened to the animals that Sergey Skripal kept in his Salisbury house, the British side, first in an unnamed leak and then as a DEFRA comment, said that "when a vet was able to access the property, two guinea pigs had sadly died. A cat was also found in a distressed state and a decision was taken by a veterinary surgeon to euthanise the animal to alleviate its suffering".

This is however the sort of answer that brings about still more questions. Regarding the dead guinea pigs and the malnourished cat, it is said unofficially that they were taken to the Porton Down facility and incinerated there. But it remains unclear if their remains were ever tested for toxic substances, which would constitute useful evidence, and if not, why such a decision was made.

The fact that the animals were locked inside the house for several days suggests that the police did not access the alleged crime scene, which would be very unusual for such a high profile investigation. Such treatment of pets is also hardly consistent with UK laws on animal cruelty and comes as a blatant disregard to Mr Skripal's rights as the owner and companion of the animals.

Overall, it is difficult to avoid the impression that the animals have been disposed of as an inconvenient piece of evidence. It is also to be noted that, according to Mr Skripal's niece Viktoria, there were 2 cats, not one, in the house – and the whereabouts of the second one are still unknown.

The Embassy continues to request answers to these questions, however inconvenient they may seem. And we demand full cooperation.

Tweet Follow @russianembassy 76.1K followers

Scan of Russian Embassy Press Release

Below are the results of a public opinion poll. People from all around the world have commented the situation with Skripal's pets and the results are quite interesting. The style and spelling of the original are kept.

Yesterday, 02:39 PM #448

Shalcker Over 9000!

7 YEAR MEMBER

Join Date: Jan 2011
Posts: 9,593

Meanwhile, innocent Russian question "What happened to Skripal pets?" reveals...

Apparently, noone actually looked through house after it was sealed, and UK only found out about pets from Russian question... normally you would expect them being driven to Porton Down for tests and kept there...

"We found two dead guinea pigs and one live cat, so we killed the cat too since we thought it was suffering and then incinerated them all"... are you doing all you can to look suspicious? :/

Cats are usually quite resilient... who exactly made a call it should be killed instead of saved?

--- Updated ---

- It seems that the British Security services did with a black Persian cat and with the two guinea pigs the same as they did with the Skripals after Sergey and Yulia's reviving. They have just been through some stressful things lately and 'merciful' MI6 had to put them down in order to help to alleviate their suffering.

- It's as clear as day. The cat got rid of the guinea pigs and the special services did the same getting rid of the cat. The same is true for the owners of the cat and the guinea pigs. Russia banished Skripal with a shame, and the British special services poisoned him as Skripal's life was deemed unnecessary.
- MI6 catch Skripal's black cat. It reports that the mission completed and it pissed in the buckwheat of col. Skripal. Maybe it also questioned MI6 of being promoted. Instead, British special services put their agent, Persian cat, down telling it that the cat knows too much. But what if the cat was the very GRU agent who poisoned Skripal's family?
- British security services cover their tracks! With all the questions and the pressure, sometimes maybe a little something slips out and the Black Persian cat was no exception. So maybe the cat will let something slip.
- Well, there are only two real explanations in the case of two guinea pigs dead and one black Persian cat deeply stressed. If they survived they hadn't licked this notorious door handle.

- Well, that means that it was the hosts who were really licking the door handle. Maybe the guinea pigs had being caged and the cat hadn't managed to open it. Anybody will be placed under serious stress when you are hungry; the food is before your eyes, and you unable to take it! No one could survive that! The guinea pigs, in this case, have died of fright as they couldn't help fearing that one might eat the other. Where are the hell all the Societies for the Protection of Animals?
- Eventually, the two guinea pigs have starved to death of natural causes. The one cat was put down. All of them were burned down in the end. Sergey Skripal is in a coma. Yulia Skripal is recovering. "Novichok" gas has a very low performance. The British medicine has proved to be a most effective deterrent with one recovered and one put down. What are compassionate Britons! God forbid, you get under stress in London!

Russian Embassy in London

Like This Page · Yesterday · 🌐

Q: Do you have a comment on the Department for Environment, Food, and Rural Affairs statement regarding the fate of Sergey Skripal's pets?

A: Shortly after we posed the question on what happened to the animals that Sergey Skripal kept in his Salisbury house, the British side, first in an unnamed leak and then as a DEFRA comment, said that "when a vet was able to access the property, two guinea p... See More

Like

Comment

Share

39

Chronological ▾

15 Shares

21 Comments

Matt Single As with humans, if a cat had been exposed to even a tiny quantity of 'nerve agent' it would not have been in a distressed state, it would have been dead as disco within five minutes as the signals between the brain and the body all fire at the same tim... See More

Like · Reply · 21h

4

Samantha Hewavitharana I posted about this. It is very sad and cruel.
<https://www.facebook.com/samantha.hewavitharana/posts/1489650744496412>

Like · Reply · 21h · Edited

1

Chris Chatsworthy Absolutely disgusting behaviour by the police, how much more of this Fred Karno's circus are we going to have to put up with???

Like · Reply · 20h

Irina Fuss Fair enough. Incinerated- can that be correct? odd response. What a pity.

Like · Reply · 20h

👤 2 Replies

Sean Tunctan Swimming Certificate. 📞
<https://youtu.be/GhW2SvJpbQw>

I'm Going on Tour!

YOUTUBE.COM

Write a comment...

The original source of this article is Global Research
Copyright © Bassim al-Khalili, Global Research, 2018

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Bassim al-Khalili

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca