The Russian military officially entered the southwest Syria offensive this evening, a source told Al-Masdar from the Dara'a Governorate.

The Russian Aerospace Forces unleashed a massive assault over northeastern Dara'a, tonight, targeting several areas controlled by the jihadist rebels.

According to a military source in the government stronghold of Izra'a, the Russian Aerospace Forces launched over 20 airstrikes across northeastern Dara'a tonight.

The source told Al-Masdar that the Russian Aerospace Forces specifically launched airstrikes over the towns of Masikah, Aeeb, and Busra Al-Harir.

The added that the majority of the airstrikes were launched on the jihadist stronghold of Busra Al-Harir, which is located directly east of Izra'a.

This attack by the Russian Aerospace Forces comes just 48 hours after the U.S. State Department issued a stern warning to both the Russian and Syrian governments about escalating their offensive in southwest Syria.
