

Prime Minister Trudeau's Bill C-63: "Like Something Out of a Science-Fiction Horror Fantasy"

By John C. A. Manley and Ezra Levant

Global Research, March 13, 2024

Region: Canada

Theme: Law and Justice, Police State &

Civil Rights

All Global Research articles can be read in 51 languages by activating the Translate Website button below the author's name (only available in desktop version).

To receive Global Research's Daily Newsletter (selected articles), click here.

Click the share button above to email/forward this article to your friends and colleagues. Follow us on Instagram and Twitter and subscribe to our Telegram Channel. Feel free to repost and share widely Global Research articles.

Global Research Fundraising: Stop the Pentagon's Ides of March

Justin Trudeau is trying to pass Bill C-63 into law — which would make it illegal to "express hate on the internet."

First, let's look up the word "hate" in the Oxford Dictionary to keep us somewhat rooted in reality:

"Hate: intense or passionate dislike"

So the Liberal government is trying to make it illegal to express an intense dislike for somebody or something.

"The proposals contained in Bill C-63 are so bizarre and outrageous that most would dismiss them outright," says host Bob Metz, in last week's episode of Just Right. "Like something out of a science-fiction horror fantasy, the bill allows the government to convict, fine, and imprison 'for life' people who have not committed any speech offence, but who may do so in the future."

Yes, you could go to jail if there are reasonable grounds to suspect you might leave a comment after a YouTube video about how much you dislike something (such as this Orwellian law) or somebody (such as our Orwellian prime minister).

"Hate is obviously a human emotion," says Ezra Levant in the same episode of Just Right. "We all know that. Sometimes we feel love, sometimes we feel hate, sometimes we feel contempt, sometimes we feel respect. That's a normal, human personality. And you could no more ban hate than you could pass the 'Love Each Other Act'... You cannot eradicate hate from the human heart. The essence of this Bill C-63 is it turns that feeling into a crime. It's not even a thought crime... It's a feelings crime."

I guess we are all going to jail.

But for an even more far-fetched "science-fiction horror fantasy" story, you can listen to Just Right's exposé about how Bill C-63 "is the perfect weapon of violence for those consumed with irrational hatreds that they do not wish to have exposed" available here.

"How are such people to be identified? Through a 'complaint' system in which the identity of the complainant is kept a secret. The complainant can be anyone. As explained by Ezra Levant, "a person may lay an information if he fears that another person will commit a speech offense in the future." And that's just the tip of the iceberg of Bill C-63's unconscionable and immoral proposals.

But more frightening than the contents of the bill itself are the people who would even allow themselves to entertain such evil. Former Heritage Minister Steven Guilbeault, who drafted the law, has announced that the government also has a "nuclear option" by being able to make it impossible to access any specific website in the country.

The Trudeau government's obsession with regulating and censoring the internet suggests that he and his government greatly fear the truth. Truth is, after all, what is being eliminated from any allowable public discussion."

*

Note to readers: Please click the share button above. Follow us on Instagram and Twitter and subscribe to our Telegram Channel. Feel free to repost and share widely Global Research articles.

John C. A. Manley is the author of Much Ado About Corona: A Dystopian Love Story , the forthcoming All The Humans Are Sleeping and other works of speculative fiction. You get free chapters from his novels by subscribing to his Blazing Pine Cone email newsletter at https://blazingpinecone.com/subscribe/

He is a regular contributor to Global Research.

Featured image is from Flickr

The original source of this article is Global Research Copyright © John C. A. Manley and Ezra Levant, Global Research, 2024

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: John C. A. Manley and Ezra Levant

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca