5 April 2012

Since Global Research was launched in 2001, our website has undergone several transformations with a view to bringing you the news and analysis you need and making information as broadly accessible as possible.

Over the last few years, we have received many suggestions on how we can update the Global Research website in order to make access to articles and resources faster, clearer and more user-friendly.

We have taken your comments and suggestions into consideration and are pleased to announce that we are now in the process of giving the Global Research website a much-needed upgrade! In the coming months, you will see changes to our website that we hope will greatly improve your browsing experience.

As we go through this process, we want to make sure that any modifications will improve the site's functionality; we therefore ask you, our readers, to send in any suggestions you may have on improving how you interact with the Global Research website. What would you like to see? What is important to you when accessing articles online?

Please direct all emails to: media@globalresearch.ca with "Website Upgrade" in the subject line.

Undertaking projects such as these is necessary in order to ensure the important information shared by Global Research reaches as many people as possible, as well as to ensure the safety and reliability of our website.

However, we continue to operate on a shoestring budget, and a major project such as a website upgrade places considerable strain on our finances. Therefore, whether you are new to Global Research or have been following our articles and videos for years, we ask that you show your support by making a donation or starting a membership in order to help us cover the costs of this much-needed endeavour. And rest assured that access to Global Research will always continue to be FREE because we believe the truth needs to be told.

We hope you will enjoy the changes you will see in the coming months, and appreciate all contributions made in keeping Global Research active, engaging and accessible. Thank you to all our readers for your continued support in the fight against media disinformation.
