Countless people have called in the last few days to ask me if Kari Lake or Blake Masters or Adam Laxalt or Lauren Boebert— and all the rest of the midterm candidates in "stalled" races— will ultimately prevail.

My answer is always the same: no. No, I don't think they're going to prevail. They're going to lose. In fact, they're being cheated out of their victories right now.

My rule of thumb is simple: if you're a Trump-aligned Republican and your election results were not released within 24 hours of Election Day, then you're toast.

The entire point of "slow-rolling" vote-counting is that it gives the cheaters the necessary time to count how many ballots they need to beat the Republican candidate and then to manufacture those ballots — or to disappear the necessary number of GOP ballots by "abjudication."

Didn't the GOP learn any of these lessons from the 2020 election? Of course not.

No gang of white-show lawyers is ready and waiting in Maricopa County to shut down the steal when Democrats tell people on Election Day to put their ballots in a trash-bin marked Door #3.

On November 9th, Senate candidate Adam Laxalt (R- NV) reassured his voters that his opponent needed 63% of the remaining 84,000 votes in Clark County, Nevada to catch up with him in the vote-count.

Of the 84,000 votes left to count in Clark County, Cortez Masto could win 63% of them and she would still lose.

That doesn't even take into account the gains we will make from rural counties.

Last night went exactly as we anticipated. We added 3K from the rurals and more are coming. She added some Clark County mail. We expect the remaining mail universe to fall well below the percentage she needs to catch us. No status change.

So it was strange, and a little disconcerting, to see that Laxalt's opponent got exactly 63% of those remaining 84,000 votes two days later.

In a new batch of 27.3k ballots counted in Clark County, here are the #nvsen results:
- Cortez Masto received 17.2k votes (63 percent)
- Laxalt received 9k votes (33 percent)

This drops Laxalt's statewide lead from 9k to about 800 votes.

Laxalt's confidence was gone today — as he realized that Democrats have no problem posting literally unbelievable vote margins in order to win.

Here is where we are — we are up only 862 votes. Multiple days in a row, the mostly mail in ballots counted continue to break in higher DEM margins than we calculated. This has narrowed our victory window. The race will come down to 20-30K Election Day Clark drop off ballots.

Senate candidate Blake Masters (R-AZ) also seemed to share the view that ultimately he would be victorious in his race against Mark Kelly — because he too believed that the remaining 500,000 votes to be counted there heavily favored him.

Why would anyone believe such things after living through the 2020 election? Why did the electronic voting machines stop in at least 5 states on Election Day this week? What do they think is really going on?

It's almost like they don't understand how cheating works.

Do they think the machines malfunctioned and the vote-counting stopped in Arizona, California, and Nevada by accident or something?

David Cross already has the receipts for the Warnock-Walker race — just look at the counties and precincts in Georgia breaking 96% and 97% and 98% for Warnock!

Why do you think Fox News has called the race for Mark Kelly over Blake Masters even though only 85% of the vote has been counted? What's with the rush now? There's 400,000 votes left to be counted after all — right?

Meanwhile, why do you think that nobody has called the race for Lauren Boebert in Colorado — even though 99% of the vote has been counted? That same thing happened a few days ago with Ron Johnson in Wisconsin — he was ahead by 30,000 votes with 99% of the votes already counted and no corporate media outlet would call the race for Johnson.

It's almost like you don't understand how elections work in America now.
