LAS VEGAS (FOX5/Gray News) - Thirty-four-year-old Jessica Rosalie Rhodes was one of two women found dead in Nevada's Valley of Fire State Park after going missing from a hiking trip on July 22.

The temperature in the park that day reached a high of approximately 113 degrees.

"It could've happened to any of us, doesn't matter how good of shape you're in, how prepared you are," said Julie Johnston, Jessica Rhodes' friend and owner of Camp Rhino, where she regularly exercised.

"Nobody really knows what actually happened, but nobody could've been in better shape or more prepared to do something like that."

Jessica Rhodes and 29-year-old Diana Matienzo Rivera were found separated, one on the trails and the other in a canyon. They were first reported missing by another group of hikers.

Her mother, Josephine Rhodes, said she believes her daughter was trying to help her friend.

"They were trying to get back, but they just didn't make it and she didn't want to leave her friend down there, so she tried to help her friend," Josephine Rhodes said. "And that's just the type of child she is."

Matt Byars began traveling the country at a young age, as a standout baseball player competing in tournaments.

Seeing all those different places, all life had to offer, that's how he fell in love with the outdoors.

"My parents traveled all over with him for club baseball, and he was able to kind of see what other places were like," said his oldest sister, Lindsay Krull. "He always loved fishing. He always loved being outdoors. And when he moved out to Colorado, he was really able to do all those things to the max.

"We always kind of knew he wanted to live his life to the fullest.

"We always kind of knew that he would end up in a place like Colorado."

A 15-year-old died in Kenai Fjords National Park Monday afternoon while hiking the Harding Icefield trail outside of Seward, according to park officials.

A statement from the national park says the young hiker needed emergency medical services and CPR about 3.7 miles into the trail. It says bystanders helped to provide CPR, and paramedics from a LifeMed helicopter attempted to resuscitate the hiker, but were unsuccessful, and he died on the trail of cardiac arrest.

According to the park, agencies including Alaska State Troopers, Alaska Wildlife Troopers, the Bear Creek Fire Department, Seward Volunteer Ambulance Corps and LifeMed Alaska all responded.

28-year-old Vermont woman falls to her death while hiking in B.C.

A 28-year-old woman is dead after officials say she fell while on a “technical and advanced-level hike” near Whistler, B.C.

Nicole Killian of Richmond, Vt. dropped down the “chimney” portion of the Black Tusk area in Garibaldi Provincial Park around 11:15 a.m. on Monday, Sea to Sky RCMP said in a statement the following day.

After the fall was reported, Mounties say members of its Whistler unit, RCMP Air Services, BC Ambulance paramedics and Whistler Search and Rescue responded to the area to provide medical aid, but weren’t able to save the hiker’s life.

Killian is being remembered as a “rescuer of dogs and people alike,” according to a statement from her family that was provided by police.

It explains that the 28-year-old had just earned a doctorate in nursing from New York University and was a member of her local search and rescue team.

While Killian was an experienced hiker, B.C. officials are warning backcountry enthusiasts that the Black Tusk chimney and scree portion can be extremely dangerous, even for seasoned mountaineers.

A public information officer for the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department confirmed that the cause of death of famous actor Julian Sands has been deemed "undetermined," People reported.

The officer said the death was ruled "undetermined due to the condition of the body and this is common when dealing with cases of this type," according to People.

Recreational hikers discovered human remains on the mountainside on June 24. The remains were confirmed to be those of Sands on June 27. Sands was reported missing in January, after failing to return home after hiking in California's Mount Baldy, which is known for its dangerous terrain, according to People.

The manner of Sands' death was unclear at the time his body was located, and the autopsy failed to provide conclusive information about what precisely led to the British actor's death.

Sands was a highly experienced hiker who had a passion for pushing himself to new levels. He spoke of his love for hiking during a 2020 interview with The Guardian, and thanked his parents for supporting his activities.

CAVE CREEK, AZ (3TV/CBS 5) -- Earlier this week, firefighters say a doctor died from heat stroke while hiking near Cave Creek. Now, his wife is remembering her husband and warning others about hiking in extreme heat. The 32-year-old doctor, Evan Dishion, leaves behind his wife and baby girl.

The Dishion's just had their baby girl, Chloe, three months ago and have been married for eight years. On Monday, Evan went on a hike, which turned into Amy Dishion's worst nightmare. "He promised me he would turn around if it got too hot. I don't know why he didn't," Amy said.

Now, Amy sits with her three-month-old girl, not knowing what their future looks like. Amy says her husband was hiking at Spur Cross Trailhead with a group of friends. Unfortunately, they got lost and ran out of water before calling 911. "I can guarantee you that if there's one last sip of water left, Evan will not be the one to drink it. He's going to make sure other people are OK," Amy said.

My Take...

Last year, while banned from Twitter for warning about mRNA jabs in kids, I wrote a post on Gettr about three Canadian hikers dying suddenly in the United States. (click here)

Every COVID-19 Vaccinated person must re-evaluate their physical activities.

I believe cardio-intense activities such as marathons, swimming, cycling, running and hiking are far too dangerous for the COVID-19 vaccinated who have not had a full cardiac work-up in the US.

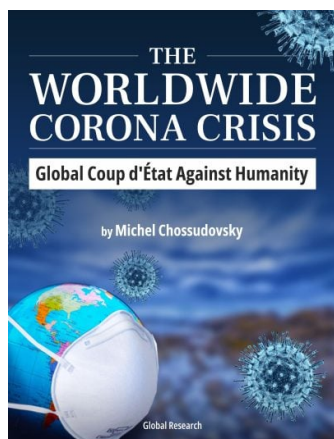

The risk of myocarditis post COVID-19 vaccination is about 1 in 30 and the risk of sudden cardiac death with these activities is simply much too high.

Look at these 24 deaths: paramedics, doctors, nurses, athletes and personal trainers. Even the fittest, most experienced hikers are dying suddenly.
