

Hillary's Presidential Prospects Are Tanking: Will Democrats Wake Up in Time?

By Pam Martens and Russ Martens Global Research, June 09, 2015 Wall Street On Parade 8 June 2015 Region: USA Theme: Religion In-depth Report: U.S. Elections

Image: Hillary Clinton at Press Conference on Status of Her Emails While Secretary of State

The chickens are coming home to roost in the campaign of the quintessential Wall Street Democrat, Hillary Clinton. The mountains of cash sluiced into the Clinton pockets and their Foundation together with Hillary's destruction of emails from her stint as Secretary of State caught up with her last week in two devastating polls showing that a majority of Americans don't think she is trustworthy.

As cynical as we've become as a nation, surely a requirement to occupy the highest office in the land should include the belief by your fellow Americans that one is trustworthy.

On June 2, a CNN/ORC poll was released showing that 57 percent of those polled, up from 49 percent in March, say Hillary is not honest and trustworthy. The same day, the Washington Post published the findings from a poll conducted by itself and ABC, summarizing the findings as follows:

"Clinton's favorability ratings are the lowest in a Post-ABC poll since April 2008, when she was running for president the first time. Today, 41 percent of Americans say she is honest and trustworthy, compared with 52 percent who say she is not — a 22-point swing in the past year."

A reader comment below the Washington Post article, posted by "Tobit" may be an epiphany. The reader noted that: "...Clinton's favorability is at its lowest point since she ran for president two elections ago. This seems to indicate that the more people get to know Hillary, the less they like her. Of course her election 'hide in plain sight' strategy won't work."

Kyle Wingfield, writing in his blog at the Atlanta Journal Constitution on June 3, explained that the loss of confidence is dramatic among voters who identify as independents. Wingfield writes:

"In the course of just six weeks, Clinton's standing with independents on the 'cares about people like you' question went from plus 51 to minus 17. Equally stunning is her drop on the 'is honest and trustworthy' question: from plus 37 to minus 24.

"Those do not look like the periodic gyrations that political candidates face over the course of a long campaign. They look like a hard flip from an overwhelmingly positive view of her to a sharply negative view of her." The original source of this article is Wall Street On Parade Copyright © Pam Martens and Russ Martens, Wall Street On Parade, 2015

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Pam Martens and Russ Martens

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca