

My Message to the World: Stop the Murderous War in Ukraine!

Camus: "Nothing is more inexcusable than war and the call to hatred of nations...One must say it, write it if possible, shout it out if necessary!"

I already mentioned Camus's diary entry quoted in the headline, citing the source, in the "Global-Research" and "NRhZ" article "Being salt of the earth...". Since it was a scientific article, my own point of view was not made clear. But science is born of life and is called to serve the need of people and not to be silent.

Scientists who have nothing to contribute to a systematised murder of human beings called war are judging themselves: The plight of humanity does not touch their hearts and thus all their wisdom and science is degraded to a self-satisfied game of wits that knows no commitment. This is what my esteemed psychology professor taught me many years ago.

In the country where I currently live, I can still receive Russia Today (RTD) and view the US-West's murderous proxy war in Ukraine from a different perspective than through the eyes of German mass media. Their unspeakable war-mongering from warm hacks' offices – first and foremost the "SPIEGEL", which was a proud intellectual paper for us students in the post-war years – can hardly be endured by a civilised person and should be banned by an ethics commission.

The daily TV images from completely destroyed and smoking war zones choke the throat and stomach. They are mainly TV reports about the indescribable agonies of the civilian population and the multinational military. Old women and men as well as young mothers with their babies and children vegetate out of mortal fear together with pets in dark, damp basements under bombed-out houses – often for days without bread, water or medical care. Full of hope, they wait for a merciful soul to save them from starvation.

Anyone who arrogantly dismisses these testimonies from the Donbass or other parts of the war zone as negligible Russian propaganda has already had their heart petrified by the propaganda roller of the US West – they can no longer feel like a human being.

Finally, it should not go unmentioned that all wars of the ruling power-hungry authorities should be banned from the life of humanity, also from Yemen, Syria or Palestine.
