Like clockwork, the Disneyland measles false flag has predictably evolved into a national call for medical fascism, as politicians from both sides of the aisle unequivocally throw their support behind the jab agenda, which is right now pushing to eliminate vaccine exemptions and force everyone in America to get vaccinated.

The absurdly titled “Vaccines Save Lives” initiative declares into existence an alternate universe in which vaccines are 100% safe and effective. Introduced by Representatives Adam Schiff (D-Calif.), Charlie Dent (R-Penn.), Thomas Marino (R-Penn.) and Peter Welch (D-Vt.), the resolution “affirms [that] vaccines and immunizations save lives and are essential to maintain the public health, economic and national security of the people of the United States.”

By dressing up in patriotic terms such draconian nonsense, the politicians behind this decree aim to crystallize in the public groupthink the idea that vaccines are nothing less than God’s gift to mankind. Without them, claims these corporate hacks, there would be “a true public health crisis” that puts mostly children at risk.

According to The Hill, more than 90 members of Congress have signed onto the resolution which, while it isn’t binding in any sort of legal sense, represents the first shot fired in a brewing war against medical freedom. The mainstream media, the federal government and even some medical professionals are all calling for vaccine exemptions to be eliminated, and this resolution backs that sentiment.

“If passed, this resolution will bolster the current backlash against vaccine exemptions and pave the way for states’ efforts to mandate universal vaccinations,” explains the Alliance for Natural Health USA.

Even more absurd than the resolution itself are specific claims contained within it that “there is no credible evidence to show that vaccines cause life-threatening or disabling diseases in healthy children or adults.” This statement is patently false, contradicted both by the medical literature and the package inserts included with vaccines by their respective manufacturers.

The official package insert for the MMR II vaccine,^[PDF] manufactured by Merck and administered to prevent measles, lists the following adverse effects, including “life-threatening or disabling diseases,” observed in conjunction with the jab:

- Panniculitis (inflammation of the subcutaneous fat layer below the skin)
- Atypical measles (yes, the MMR vaccine can cause and spread non-wild-type measles)
- Vasculitis (inflammation of the blood vessels)
- Pancreatitis (inflammation of the pancreas)
- Diabetes mellitus
- Thrombocytopenia (low blood platelet count)
- Anaphylaxis (whole-body allergic reaction)
- Arthritis
- Encephalitis (inflammation and swelling of the brain)
- Febrile convulsions
- Aseptic meningitis
- Pneumonia
- Retinitis (inflammation of the retina of the eye)
- Epididymitis (inflammation of the coiled tube at the back of the testicle that stores and carries sperm)
- Death

Literally every other vaccine currently on the market comes with a manufacturer-issued package insert like this one that lists some or all of these same adverse events as possible consequences of vaccination. Are Dent, Schiff and all the others onboard with the “Vaccines Save Lives” resolution completely oblivious to this fact, or is their thinking being clouded by their campaign donors?

The top financial contributors to Congress during the 2013-2014 session, according to OpenSecrets.org, include Pfizer Inc., Amgen Inc., Merck & Co., Abbott Laboratories, AstraZeneca PLC, Eli Lilly & Co., Sanofi, AbbVie Pharmaceuticals, Johnson & Johnson, GlaxoSmithKline, United Therapeutics, Novartis AG, Genentech Inc., Novo Nordisk and Allergan Inc. — these are all companies that produce drugs and vaccines.

Dr. Richard Pan, the pediatrician and Senator currently spearheading legislation in California to eliminate vaccine exemptions, has also been exposed as accepting money directly from Merck, the manufacturer behind the MMR vaccine for measles.

Congress needs to hear from you! It is critical that any legislation trying to eliminate vaccine exemptions, like SB 277 in California, be stopped:
