*There are many underreported or even un-reported stories about Maui wildfires and the aftermath at Lahaina, as we have come to expect of mainstream media. A video has surfaced by the author of the book The Deep State Encyclopaedia, Really Graceful, that aims to give a voice to the Maui residents in their eyewitness accounts and also reveals facts that the media has buried.*

Below is a transcript of that video which has been written verbatim:

The Maui Fires

On August 8th, 2023, the historic town of Lahaina on the island of Maui a popular tourist spot was destroyed by a fire that seemingly came out of nowhere. As of Monday morning August 14th, the death toll sits at 96.

An estimated 2200 Acres have been burned, over 2 000 buildings have been reduced to Ash, and of those buildings, 86 percent of them were residential homes. The investigation is ongoing, loved ones are still missing but alongside the rubble in ruin questions remain.

In this video, my goal is to give a voice to Maui residents in their eyewitness accounts, highlight key facts that have been completely buried, provide relevant historical context, and ultimately share with you what the media won't tell you about the Maui fires.

The Kingdom of Hawaii

Not so long ago the band of islands we call Hawaii was a sovereign state known as the Kingdom of Hawaii because of its key location in the Pacific Ocean and its fertile ground, Hawaii was historically a prized place for trade. However, the kingdom fell when the United States gobbled it up under the whole notion of manifest destiny.

With a Little Help from the U.S. government, a group of American and European businessmen overthrew the Hawaiian monarchy.

You see the Hawaiian Islands offered a key position for a U.S. military base and would Aid in the development of the U.S. as a global superpower and thus the final Queen of the Kingdom of Hawaii was deposed in 1893.

From then on Hawaii played a key role in the world stage. Just think about it the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor which occurred on December 7th, 1941, it had a significant effect on the United States and was crucial in influencing the government's decision to enter World War II. It was also key in rallying the emotional support for war from U.S. troops and civilians alike.

Nearly a century later there is open discourse on the idea that President Roosevelt either let it happen, as in, he had poor knowledge of Pearl Harbor and did nothing, or he caused it to happen, you know the same conversation we have about George W bush.

Alas Americans would not and could not give their consent to war without a reason they just needed to be given one problem-reaction solution.

Paradise Lost

At 11 A.M on August 4th, 2023, it was reported by satellites that a handful of small fires had started on Maui around the same time.

No cause has officially been given and this is a key detail that I just want to emphasize, it wasn't just one fire that was started, but several at once.

On Tuesday Morning August 8th Lahaina, the kingdom of Hawaii's Capital City began to witness wildfires.

The word Lahaina is pronounced luh-hay-nuh and it means cruel or merciless sun, which describes the sunny dry climate of the area. "La" refers to the sun and "haina" means merciless. According to Britannica, Lahaina is a small town located in Maui and in the Hawaiian language, Lahaina means cruel or merciless Sun.

Survivors of the fire reported that there were no sirens, or warnings when the fire started, only strong winds that brought distant fire into the residential areas within minutes.

According to emergency officials Maui's warning sirens didn't sound as devastating wildfires approach as they should have. On the island of Maui, there are 80 outdoor sirens to alert residents of tsunamis and other natural disasters, but those Sirens were totally silent as people burned to death.

According to investigators, quote "nobody at the state and nobody at the county attempted to activate those Sirens based on our records" end quote. Emergency alert texts were reportedly sent out but due to the rate at which these fires spread. the towers were down, the power lines were down, and people weren't receiving those alerts on their phones or TVs, all of which contributed to the chaos.

The fires were so intense and spread so rapidly that the U.S. Coast Guard saved over 50 individuals after some people fled the fire by jumping into the Pacific Ocean. The fires were still active the following day and locals reported being barred off from bringing supplies to the affected areas just to even search for their loved ones and render aid.

And this is another weird strange detail, the Incident Commander of the 2017 Las Vegas country music mass shooting, one of the biggest cover-ups in U.S history just happens to be Maui's police chief John Pelletier who said the following about the fires:

"Find these, you know, our family and our friends. The Remains we're finding is through a fire that melted metal we know we've got to go quick but we got to do it right so when we pick up the remains and they fall apart. and so when you have 200 people running through the scene yesterday and some of you that's what you're stepping on I don't know how much more you want me to describe it."

Hawaii governor Josh Green said the town looked like a bomb had been dropped and he wasted no time blaming the fires on climate change. Of course, mainstream media reigned with this narrative and has blamed humans for living and vacationing in Maui for the wildfires, which brings us into a whole other conversation entirely, about who is actually responsible for the wildfires. in Maui?

How did the Maui fires start? What we know about humans making disasters worse

Several dead as wildfires continue to burn across Hawaii islands; evacuations continue

According to some local's bad government and poor land management is to blame as dry non-native, invasive grasses, weren't properly cleared in previous years which served as perfect tender under the right conditions, strong winds, and drought, and I want you to remember what we talked about, earlier satellites picked up all these flyers across the island igniting around the same time, same day, the morning of August 4th. It wasn't just one fire, it was multiple fires across Maui and I'm not trying to interject my opinion when I'm just giving you the facts, but that in particular sticks out to me. I find it weird.

So, of course, there's already a wrongful death lawsuit brewing, and quote "legal teams from Watskara Singleton Schreiber in France Law Group firms have all independently reached the conclusion that Hawaiian Electric's compromised infrastructure served as the ignition source for the Inferno" end quote.

Hawaiian couple sues power companies over Lahaina destruction amid historic Maui wildfires

A Hawaiian couple is suing four power companies, accusing them of ignoring weather warnings amid the historic Maui wildfires that have killed at least 93 people.

The main plaintiffs, Monica and Rede Eder, own a house in historic town of Lahaina, which was decimated by the wildfire. Their suit is "on behalf of a class and subclasses of all persons similarly situated."

Clean Energy and The WEF

I just want to point out that according to the World Economic Forum in an article that they published in 2018, Hawaii plans to be the first U.S. state to run entirely on clean energy, with clean energy being defined as solar wind biomass and geothermal green power.

And after someone sent me that article I was reading up on how our current power grid will stand up to the clean energy goals of the future and basically, the corporations are lobbying for our entire power grid to be replaced.

Blaming the Electric Companies

So, if you fault Hawaiian Electric, sue them for all their worth, put them out of business, who replaces them? Will it be whoever is going to bring forth the goals of Agenda 2030 in the world economic Forum?

So, attorneys are blaming the electric company, probably because the electric company has the deepest pocket, the governor is blaming climate change, and other people are blaming land mismanagement, while others are whispering about directed energy weapons.

I know I never talk about directed energy weapons, and you all know this not because I deny their existence, but it's like conspiracy quicksand over here.

Directed Energy Weapons

It's too easy for people to dismiss because fires can be attributed to many things, but there is just this glaring coincidence one cannot overlook for this particular fire. AFRL's Directed Energy Directorate is the Department of the air force center of expertise for directed energy and Optical Technologies. (Directed Energy - AF)

They specialize in directed energy weapons that harness the power of the electromagnetic spectrum to enable Airmen to effectively and affordably strike critical targets all at the speed of light, according to their website.

AIR FORCE MAUI OPTICAL AND SUPERCOMPUTING (AMOS) SITE

Freedom to operate and maintain satellites in space is a critical component of our national security. The U.S. Air Force assists in achieving this freedom, in part, by maintaining an awareness of the locations and capabilities of all man-made objects in space. This awareness is called space domain awareness (SDA). The scientists and engineers of the Air Force Research Laboratory (AFRL) advance technologies that improve the nation's capability to maintain SSA as the number, sizes, locations, and capabilities of man-made objects in space evolve over time.

The AFRL Directed Energy Directorate operates two major telescope sites that are

The AFRL Directed Energy Directorate operates two major telescope sites that are used to Advanced SSA Technologies, one of these sites is located on the Kirkland Air Force Base in New Mexico, the other site is located on, you'll never guess, the other site is located on Maui. The Maui site is called the Air Force Maui Optical and Supercomputing Site (observatory).

So, let's go down the list a little logical little assessment here, do direct energy weapons exist that can cause wildfires? According to U.S government websites, yes.

Does the US government have the ability to use those resources according to the US Government website, yes.

If the US government has this tool, does it mean other countries have this tool, could they use it on the U.S.? Theoretically yes.

Would wildfires sparked by direct energy weapons serve their Hegelian dialectic of problem, reaction, solution, you know, policy changes and narrative shifts in sustainable development goals and whatnot? Sure.

Can we prove that they used a directed energy weapon and that it was the US government who used it? personally, I'm going to say not at this moment, no, we can't prove it, but what I will say is that if I were on the ground in Maui and I had a basic understanding of local politics and procedures, and I decided to dig deeper on this story, I would probably want to know who fled the wildfires before anyone else.

Million Dollar Homes

Who from government or high society was evacuated before the traffic jams and all the chaos started and I would also want to watch who benefits from the destruction.

The average residential home in Maui is just at the median price of 1.2 million, dollars can insurance companies afford to rebuild thousands of homes in this area?

Can families who didn't have homeowners insurance afford to rebuild their homes? and businesses with the rapid inflation we've experienced over the past couple of years?

The cost of building has increased substantially, what will insurance cover? because I'm imagining a scenario where residents are left with land, with no means to rebuild, and nowhere to live in the interim, and yeah that would make it hard to say no to offers on your property.

Video excerpts are played from: @GEOFFCYGNUS who says:

"You know, there have been reports of looting and civil unrest. I mean I've saw you know a few kind of rough-looking people when I was down here, but I mean nothing happened, but it's, it might be a good idea to stay out of here for the time being."

And you can see over there, you know there was a multi-million dollar beachfront houses were lost, uh you know, I mean, I know every house on Maui nowadays is, almost every house is going to be over a million bucks.

Lack of Information

But all of my neighbours and I are interested in what the news actually is because we don't have access to the internet, not cellular, not cable internet. We don't have a TV., we do have the radio, but for whatever reason the radio out here continues to just mainly play music. I've heard very, very few broadcasts of news and I don't know if that's just my timing of listening to it. but there's really been very little information."

And also @MRAINOKEA who says:

"I live on Maui, the media is lying and or covering up the extent of the damage and the death count. I personally know people that are telling me that death and destruction is way worse than we're being told. I am witnessing the cover-up by the media first-hand."

So", asks, Really Graceful "My final question that the media would never ask is, are we witnessing a land grab at buyer sale prices in the future?" What do you think internet friends?"
