

The New York Times Reports Gaza Civilians 'Are Being Killed at Historic Pace'

By Max Jones

Global Research, November 28, 2023
ScheerPost 27 November 2023

Region: Middle East & North Africa

Theme: Law and Justice In-depth Report: PALESTINE

All Global Research articles can be read in 51 languages by activating the Translate Website button below the author's name.

To receive Global Research's Daily Newsletter (selected articles), click here.

Click the share button above to email/forward this article to your friends and colleagues. Follow us on Instagram and Twitter and subscribe to our Telegram Channel. Feel free to repost and share widely Global Research articles.

The New York Times reported on Saturday that "experts say that even a conservative reading of the casualty figures reported from Gaza shows that the pace of death during Israel's campaign has few precedents in this century."

ScheerPost publisher Robert Scheer commented on the importance of the piece, stating,

"The so-called paper of record finally acknowledges the unprecedented degree of violence visited upon civilians in Gaza by the Israeli government."

Using U.S.-made bombs that weigh 2,000 pounds "that can flatten [apartment towers]," Israel has killed "roughly 10,000 women and children" according to the Times. Women and children make up almost 70 percent of all deaths reported in Gaza.

According to Rick Brennan, the regional emergency director for the World Health Organization's Eastern Mediterranean office, the opposite is typically expected. "In past clashes between Israel and Hamas, for example, about 60 percent of the reported deaths in Gaza were men," according to the Times.

Further, "U.S. military officials often believed that the most common American aerial bomb — a 500-pound weapon — was far too large for most targets when battling the Islamic State in urban areas like Mosul, Iraq, and Raqqa, Syria," according to the Times. As the Times reported:

"'It's beyond anything that I've seen in my career,' said Marc Garlasco, a military adviser for the Dutch organization PAX and a former senior intelligence analyst at the Pentagon. To find a historical comparison for so many large bombs in such a small area, he said, we may 'have to go back to Vietnam, or the Second World War.'"

The paper also reported that

"People are being killed in Gaza more quickly...than in even the deadliest moments of U.S.-led attacks in Iraq, Syria and Afghanistan, which were themselves widely criticized by human rights groups."

Lt. Col. Jonathan Conricus, the Israeli military spokesperson, claims that civilian casualties are inevitable because of Hamas's alleged strategy of deliberately embedding itself within the civilian population of Gaza. Gaza is, however, one of the most densely populated cities on Earth, standing 25 miles long and 5 miles wide.

The Israeli military claims that the numbers of dead Palestinians reported by the Palestinian Health Ministry cannot be trusted because the Ministry operates under Hamas. Conricus claims

"We do a lot in order to prevent and, where possible, minimize the killing or wounding of civilians."

As the Times reported, international experts do not share the same skepticism of the Palestinian Health Ministry's numbers that the Israeli government does:

"[Brian Castner, a weapons investigator for Amnesty International and a former explosive ordnance disposal officer in the U.S. Air Force,] said Israel appeared to be moving too quickly to reduce harm to civilians..."

"After initially questioning the death toll in Gaza, the Biden administration now concedes that the true figures for civilian casualties may be even worse.

Barbara Leaf, the assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern affairs, told a House committee this month that American officials thought the civilian casualties were 'very high, frankly, and it could be that they're even higher than are being cited.'"

"While the experts urged caution around public statements about the specific number of people killed in a particular strike — especially in the immediate aftermath of a blast — they said the aggregate death tolls reported by the Gaza Health Ministry have typically proved to be accurate."

The Intercept previously uncovered evidence that the Gaza Health Ministry numbers were accurate, and possibly underreported.

Further, since Israel began its bombardment of hospitals in Gaza, recording the death toll has become increasingly challenging since the Gaza Health Ministry, according to international experts the Times spoke to, "gathers death figures from hospitals and morgues across the enclave, which tally the dead and report the names, ID numbers and other details of people killed." The majority of Gaza's hospitals have been shut down by Israel, which has necessitated "other government officials [to begin] updating the number of killed instead of the ministry," according to the Times.

The numbers will likely rise in the coming weeks. After Hamas's October 7 attack on Israel, Israel launched a "complete siege" of Gaza, cutting off food, water, electricity, and fuel. Israeli PM Benjamin Netanyahu stated that "this will be a long war."

Note to readers: Please click the share button above. Follow us on Instagram and Twitter and subscribe to our Telegram Channel. Feel free to repost and share widely Global Research articles.

Max Jones is a staff writer and video producer for ScheerPost. A summa cum laude graduate of the University of Southern California, where he studied communications and screenwriting, he is following his post-USC plans to be an independent filmmaker and screenwriter, and a journalist at ScheerPost. He has covered various topics in both his web show Journalists for Sale and writing, focusing most heavily on issues of free speech, information warfare, and foreign policy.

The original source of this article is ScheerPost Copyright © Max Jones, ScheerPost, 2023

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Max Jones

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

 $For media inquiries: {\color{blue} \underline{publications@globalresearch.ca}}$