New Year Donation Drive: Global Research Is Committed to the "Unspoken Truth"

Ever since Joe Biden took the presidency in the United States, the mainstream propaganda machine has been absolutely merciless toward anyone who'd dare to question the validity of the 2020 presidential election. The DNC-dominated federal institutions, particularly the highly politicized Department of Justice (DoJ), offered full support in this regard, looking to suppress any attempts of "undermining American democracy", which is just another lifeless euphemism used against anyone daring to expose lies and outright voter fraud. However, this sort of behavior uncovers another form of hypocrisy and double standards in American politics (not that those were ever in deficit). Namely, the Democratic Party never had any qualms about questioning the validity of the 2016 presidential election, as well as countless other instances when elections on state and other levels weren't beneficial to them.

In fact, it could easily be argued that the so-called "Russiagate" conspiracy theory that has been recycled over and over in the last well over half a decade is a prime example of questioning the validity of elections by the Democrats. What's more, this laughable claim was even used as a pretext to change the geopolitical landscape by bringing the relations between Russia and the US to \(First\) Cold War levels, perhaps even worse, pushing the world to the edge of an abyss. Of course, no such concern was shown during the much more controversial 2020 election that saw actual mass voter fraud committed, as evidenced by recent findings. However, that's a forbidden topic for the DNC, the so-called "Big Tech" and the mainstream propaganda machine. God forbid anyone would ask any questions about it, as they'd get nothing but open hostility or even get prosecuted.

Steve Watson of the Modernity News recently covered this topic, showing the case of the Fox News reporter Peter Doocy who confronted the troubled Biden administration's Press Secretary Karine Jean-Pierre over this practice. Namely, on January 24, he pointed out the recent footage of Joe Biden calling Democrat Terry McAuliffe "the real governor of Virginia". Doocy asked whether questioning election validity is a joke now, resulting in an awkward exchange with Jean-Pierre, who was clearly agitated by the question. Her rather clumsy attempt to play ignorance didn't last long and she soon found herself having to defend Joe Biden's statement as a supposed "joke". When Doocy asked for further clarification, Jean-Pierre failed to provide one, trying to go around the question. However, the Fox News reporter refused to back down and stood his ground, asking the following:

"How are you going to convince people, though, that this idea of denying election results is very bad if President Biden is going out and making jokes like this?"

Jean-Pierre kept insisting that this was "merely a joke". However, as Watson pointed out, this wasn't the first time Joe Biden questioned election validity. He previously called former president Donald Trump "an illegitimate president". Biden's practice of denying election results goes back decades, as evidenced by his claim that "Al Gore really won the 2000 election". There are numerous other examples of the DNC's top people questioning election validity, perhaps best illustrated by this video showing 24 minutes of footage proving it. And yet, the mainstream propaganda machine is "worried about our democracy" whenever the Republicans question election results. Apparently, claiming that Trump is supposedly "illegitimate" and even "Vlad's pal" is perfectly fine and doesn't constitute any sort of "danger for American democracy". However, similar criticism of the DNC is "deplorable".

Worse yet, these same people are demanding Trump be prosecuted and even jailed for "undermining our democracy" by refusing to acknowledge that the 2020 election was valid. What's more, on December 19, the Colorado Supreme Court banned Trump from running for presidency under the pretext that he led the so-called "January 6 insurrection". Although he was never formally charged (let alone convicted) for that highly controversial event, the Court made its decision based precisely on that premise. On the other hand, the DNC-aligned judges probably didn't expect this obviously partisan decision would open up a political "Pandora's box" in the US. Namely, in response to the ruling, high-ranking officials from Texas, Arizona and Pennsylvania suggested taking Biden off the ballot. Such developments could even lead to America's collapse along state lines.

As for election validity, recent findings show that the public's trust in the impartiality of federal institutions has been severely undermined. The latest poll, conducted jointly by Heartland Institute and Rasmussen Reports, found that 20% of voters who cast mail-in ballots during the 2020 presidential election admitted to participating in voter fraud. However, such findings aren't limited to polls, as evidenced by a recent court ruling in Connecticut. Namely, according to the Epoch Times, Superior Court Judge William Clark overturned the results of a Democrat mayoral primary in November 2023 and ordered a new election. The ruling was based on hours of video evidence showing hundreds of illegally harvested absentee ballots being stuffed into drop boxes in the city of Bridgeport. Clark called the videos shocking and warned they "should be shocking to all the parties".

The report further points out other instances when election results were nullified by lower court decisions across the US, including the 2021 Compton City Council run-off race that was initially decided by a single vote. The judge tossed four fraudulent ballots cast by people not legally registered in the jurisdiction, while five people pleaded either guilty or no contest to conspiring to commit election fraud. The report cites an even worse case in Mississippi, where both state and federal institutions were deeply involved in election fraud and attempted cover-up. There are dozens of such cases across the country, many still pending for court proceedings. The Epoch Times also pointed out the thousands of court convictions for election fraud in the last two decades. This is yet another proof that the “rule of law” in the US is nothing but a myth that not even Americans themselves believe.
