All the details I mentioned in the Paris 9/11 story that are consonant with false flags have now emerged. The siege ending in a standoff with reported hostages has the tell-tale signs of a false flag event. In fact, Amedi Coulibaly, one suspect, met with Sarkozy in 2009 as the below article shows. On top of that, Pentagon-dining guest and CIA asset Anwar al-Awlaki was also affiliated with the Kouachi suspects, sending funding according to reports. The story sounds like a Taken film, but I guess Liam Neeson was too busy filming part 17 to save the day. Aren't the people the terrorists consort with relevant?

an unlikely encounter between Nicolas Sarkozy, the then French President and Amedy Coulibaly, the gunman suspected of killing a police woman and of taking five hostages at a kosher grocery in eastern Paris today.

The meeting took place in 2009 in the Élysée Palace when Mr Sarkozy met nine young French men who got just jobs in a local factory. They were all from Grigny, a tough Parisian suburb torn by riots 10 years ago.

Quoting the "terrorist":

"Sarkozy is not truly popular with the youth in the estates. But that is nothing personal. In fact it is the case for most politicians," said Coulibaly.

"The encounter really impressed me. Whether I like him or not, he is the president after all."

Grigny

Amedi, 27 ans, rencontre Sarkozy cet après-midi

LA PASSÉ toute sa vie dans le quartier de la Grande-Borne à Grigny et il rencontrera aujourd'hui Nicolas Sarkozy. Amedi Coulibaly, 27 ans, travaille en contrat de professionnalisation à l'usine Coca-Cola de sa ville natale. Accompagné de neuf autres personnes, comme lui en formation en alternance, il va rendre visite au président de la République, qui souhaite rencontrer des entreprises engagées en faveur de l'emploi des jeunes.

« A la limite, si le président peut aider à me faire embaucher »

« Cela me fait plaisir, souriait hier Amedi. Je ne sais pas ce que je vais lui dire. Déjà, je vais commencer par Bonjour ! » Il lui racontera surtout son parcours professionnel, son poste actuel, qui se termine le 30 septembre. « A la limite, si le président peut aider à me faire embaucher... », souffle-t-il. Mais la mission d'Amedi ne s'arrêtera pas à un simple salut et à raconter son histoire. Unique garçon entouré de neuf sœurs, il est chargé de rapporter de nombreux « autographes et photos pour la famille ! ». Il risque d'être intimidé par le protocole. « A Grigny, nous n'avons pas l'habitude d'aller souvent à l'Élysée. Les réceptions, je ne connais pas, déclare-t-il. En plus, dans les cités, auprès des jeunes, Sarkozy n'est pas vraiment très populaire. Mais cela n'a rien de personnel. En fait, c'est le cas de la majorité des politiques. » Mais pas question pour lui de revendiquer quoi que ce soit une fois en face de Nicolas Sarkozy : « Le rencontrer en vrai, c'est impressionnant. Qu'on l'aime ou pas, c'est quand même le président. »

In my mind, the story brings back memories of the scandal involving Dominique Strauss-Kahn, and likely has to do with Anglo power axis not liking the potential pivot of France toward Palestine and Russia. However, I wouldn't place much hope in a Grand Orient Hollande move toward Palestine, with the UN playing a massive role in the Palestine issue. Meanwhile, the US has been aiding and training these Jihadis, not since Obama's regime, but, as you recall, back to Brzezinski and Robert Gates. And before that, British Intelligence did it for a hundred years prior.

"God is on your side!" Brzezinski tells the Mujahideen in Pakistan.
