PayPal has gone on a rampage by blocking organizations they don’t like access to their services.

The Free Speech Union (FSU) is one of several organizations that just lost access to the financial platform.

“PayPal has demonetised the Free Speech Union. It is not uncommon for financial companies like PayPal to withdraw services from individuals or groups who express politically contentious views, but this is the first time an organisation that defends people’s right to express such views has been demonetised. This is a new low and takes us one step closer towards a Chinese-style social credit system in which those who do not toe the party line are shut out of the financial system,” states their press release.

The Free Speech Union has updated its home page to include a compilation of clips about PayPal’s attempt to cancel us and a press release about the same. <https://t.co/GODLAHwLcV>

FSU defines itself as “non-partisan, mass-membership public interest body that stands up for the speech rights of its members.” But according to PayPal, this platform doesn’t deserve access to its services.

PayPal is a financial platform that allows anyone to make a living or maintain a business by receiving financial transfers without requiring personal bank information for every transaction.

Another organization shut down by PayPal is Law-or-Fiction, which consists of lawyers fighting against the legality of vaccine restrictions.

JUST IN: While we’re not allowed to conduct business on PayPal, guess who is... an organization that offers a support group for “MAPs” @PayPal banned us for being against pedophilia, but allow actual pedophile groups to use their services unabated. Additionally, PayPal shut down Gays Against Grmers, an organization that opposes teaching gender ideology in schools. Gays Against Grmers noted that PayPal is okay with providing its services to an organization called MAP (Minor Attracted Persons). MAP is a term used to normalize pedophilia.

And The Daily Sceptic (online media) was also banned by PayPal this week.

“PayPal has closed the accounts of the Daily Sceptic and the Free Speech Union, a new low in Big Tech’s war on free speech. Not only can you not express certain views, you can’t defend people’s right to express them,” the Daily Sceptic stated.

Many people have been cancelling their PayPal accounts in protest. The #CancelPayPal hashtag is actively gaining momentum on Twitter.

Some people and institutions have advocated for using cryptocurrencies to prevent third-party interference while transacting.
