

Political Impasse in the Wake of Italy Elections. Corrupt EU Power Elites Challenged

By R. Teichmann

Global Research, March 01, 2013

News Beacon Ireland

Region: Europe

The result of the elections in Italy is shaking the power elite. The mainstream media all over Europe and internationally portray it as a disaster and blame it on the Italian voters. The disaster seems to be that a relatively young movement (not even a party) has emerged as the strongest single force getting 25% of the vote and is refusing to form a coalition with any of the traditional parties resulting in a stalemate. This young movement calls itself the Five Star Movement (Italian: Movimento 5 Stelle, M5S). Their five stars symbolise what they stand for:

- publicly owned water
- sustainable mobility
- development
- connectivity
- environmental protection

The figurehead is the ex-comedian Beppe Grillo. He suggests:

- the traditional parties are corrupt to the core and have to go
- the people should decide whether Italy should stay in the Eurozone
- there must be a law on the conflict of interest (politicians being involved with corporations)
- there should be a "citizen's wage" for the unemployed
- there should be support for small and medium businesses
- there should be a clamp down on financial speculation and corporate greed
- cuts on health and education should be reversed

Whatever one thinks of the ex-comedian Beppe Grillo and the Five Star Movement, there is a lot in the movement's message that makes sense to many Italians.

The result of the Italian elections is the tip of an iceberg. The iceberg being the emerging power of the free peoples of Europe. Their number is increasing by the day as they see that austerity does not work and that their national governments and Brussels are not working for them but the international banking cabal. The veils are becoming thinner and the result is that political changes are starting to happen as people start to take action to shape their own future.

The success of the Five Star Movement is just one of the shifts that are taking place, shaking the political landscape.

In Greece, Syriza, a coalition of 14 parties and independent individuals, has become the strongest opposition party. As we all know, there is a permanent mass protest against the policies of the government. The government has now hired mercenaries from Blackwater to protect them from their own people's anger and to supervise the police to prevent them from siding with the people.

In Bulgaria, on the 20th of February, the government resigned as a result of massive protests that initially were about soaring electricity prices but which have turned into nationwide demonstrations against the government in general. New elections are due to be held in July.

In Spain mass protests have become permanent. There is not a day when people are not taking to the streets. Youth un-employment is higher than 50%.

In Portugal we also see massive unrest.

In Slovenia there is a national uprising going on amidst corruption scandals. During December 2012 tens of thousands of people hit the streets, occupying central squares in major cities around the country chanting now famous political slogans: "It is enough!; It is over with them, they are done! [Gotov je, Gotovi so!]; They are all crooks!"

In Ireland tens of thousands took to the streets to protest against the austerity policy of the government. Many refuse to pay new taxes and take the banks to court in connection with fraudulent lending practices (mortgages). New parties are emerging like The People's Convention (CPPC) and Direct Democracy Ireland (DDI).

In the UK the UK Independence party (UKIP) is getting stronger with every election.

In Scotland there is a strong national movement, a referendum on independence from the UK will be held.

Catalonia has recently declared itself as a sovereign entity. Plans are to hold a referendum on independence from Spain.

One thing is certain, people all over Europe are sick and tired of the traditional parties and centralised government. The European project of the power elites is in crisis because they lose the people's trust. Iceland has shown that the stranglehold of money power over people's needs can be broken. Through unity and mutual respect the non-violent transition of a centrally governed Europe towards truly democratic, sovereign nations becomes a possibility. An association of free peoples of Europe working together and with the rest of the world in solidarity and for mutual benefit is a dream that could become reality.

R. Teichmann is an activist within the Awaken Ireland Movement and a frequent contributor to this blog. He can be reached via brtirl@eircom.net.

The original source of this article is News Beacon Ireland
Copyright © R. Teichmann, News Beacon Ireland, 2013

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: R. Teichmann

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.
For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca