

President Trump's Lawyer Rudy Giuliani Says Do Not Prosecute Julian Assange

By Adam Dick

Global Research, January 02, 2019

The Ron Paul Institute for Peace and Prosperity 1 January 2019

Region: USA

Theme: Intelligence, Law and Justice

President Donald Trump would do well to listen to Rudy Giuliani, one of Trump's Russiagate investigation lawyers, concerning the propriety of prosecuting Julian Assange of WikiLeaks who has lived in the Ecuador embassy in London since 2012 to avoid extradition to the United States. Interviewed Sunday at the Fox News show Fox & Friends, Giuliani made it clear that he believes Assange should not be prosecuted for the publishing of US government information. Assange took part in First Amendment-protected activity, Giuliani explains, as did the New York Times and the Washington Post decades earlier when they published the US government's Pentagon Papers containing many revelations about US activities related to the Vietnam War.

Here is Giuliani's discussion of the matter in the interview:

It's a First Amendment issue, right? It isn't stolen property. I mean, it is stolen property, but it has a different nature when it's information. So, let's take the Pentagon Papers. The Pentagon Papers were stolen property, weren't they? They were stolen from the Pentagon — given to the New York Times and the Washington Post. Nobody went to jail in the New York Times and the Washington Post. We've had revelations during the [George W.] Bush administration — Abu Ghraib, all of that. It's stolen property, taken from the government against the law. Once it gets to a media publication, they can publish it. They can publish it for the purpose of informing people. You can't put Assange in a different position than that. He was a guy that communicated. We may not like what he communicates, but he was a media facility, he was putting that information out. Every newspaper, station grabbed it and published it.

Watch Giuliani's complete interview here.

Giuliani's reasoning in the interview is similar to the reasoning New York Times Deputy General Counsel David McCraw offered when he told judges at the US Ninth Circuit's annual judicial conference in July that he thought Assange is "sort of in a classic publisher's position" and that "the law would have a very hard time drawing a distinction between The New York Times and WikiLeaks."

Hopefully, the president will hear this sound, liberty-advancing reasoning, whether from Giuliani or someone else, and make a public and binding assurance that the US government will not seek the arrest, prosecution, or punishment of Assange.

*

Note to readers: please click the share buttons above. Forward this article to your email lists. Crosspost on your blog site, internet forums. etc.

The original source of this article is The Ron Paul Institute for Peace and Prosperity
Copyright © Adam Dick, The Ron Paul Institute for Peace and Prosperity, 2019

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Adam Dick

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca