

Selected Articles: US-Turkey Clash in Northern Syria. Turkey's "Operation Olive Branch"

By Global Research News

Global Research, January 23, 2018

Ankara is militarizing the Afrin district of Syria with operation code-named "Olive Branch" to establish a "safe zone" along the Turkish-Syrian border. The district is controlled by US-backed People's Protection Units (YPG) which are allegedly the target of the Turkish forces in the region.

Will this invasion mount up the existential crisis in the Middle East?

On Saturday, 72 Turkish jets targeted the Kurdish enclave of Afrin in Syria in an effort, codenamed Olive Branch, to remove, what Turkey's Recep Tayyip Erdoğan called a terrorist threat across northern Syria.

US and Moscow “Green Light” Turkish Aggression in Northern Syria

By Stephen Lendman, January 22, 2018

Russia is going along with Turkish aggression in northern Syria. Instead of condemning it, its Foreign Ministry urged restraint, an unacceptable response, Ankara taking full advantage.

NATO’s website has nothing about Turkey’s ongoing aggression, supporting it through silence.

By Mike Whitney, January 21, 2018

On January 17, Secretary of State Rex Tillerson announced the creation of a de facto autonomous Kurdish state in east Syria that will be supported by the United States and defended by a US-backed “proxy” army of occupation.

US, Turkey React as Syrian Forces Move into Idlib

By Tony Cartalucci, January 20, 2018

The Syrian government with support from its Russian, Iranian, and Lebanese allies has embarked on a major military operation to retake parts of Syria’s northern governorate of Idlib. As it does so, the US and its regional allies are rushing to position themselves to ensure the permanent partition of Syria is achieved.
