

Selected Articles: Venezuela “Regime Change”: Will Washington Unseat President Maduro?

By Global Research News

Global Research, July 30, 2017

Much has been said about the civil unrest in Venezuela which is spearheaded by the US-engineered opposition groups plotted to impose a ‘regime change’ and oust the incumbent president. Who compose these opposition groups and how strong are they to unseat a democratically elected leader? Read our selected articles below.

The Right lacks the military force used in the past to return to government. But it is trying to recreate such intervention by staging skirmishes at military barracks, setting fire to police stations or marching on military headquarters.

US Plotting to Topple Venezuela’s Government

By Stephen Lendman, July 29, 2017

Treasury Secretary Mnuchin represents US imperial lawlessness. Claiming the Trump administration “will not ignore the Maduro regime’s ongoing efforts to undermine democracy, freedom, and the rule of law” turned truth on its head.

By Dr. Maria Páez Victor and Edu Montesanti, July 27, 2017

The parties and leaders of the violent protests that for three months have disturbed the peace of Venezuelans, are the very same who in 2002 supported the coup d'état against President Chávez. During those tense 48 hours, one of the very first things they did was to abolish the Constitution of 1999 – the one they now purport to defend.

By Mac Slavo, July 26, 2017

You can't have a war unless there are two sides with a lot of firepower, and that's what we see in Venezuela right now. That nation is a powder keg, and it could blow at any time.
