

Stop Political Repression in South Korea

By Global Research News

Global Research, September 19, 2013

4th Media

Region: Asia

Theme: Police State & Civil Rights
In-depth Report: NORTH KOREA

On August 28, the National Intelligence Service (NIS), formerly known as the Korean CIA, raided the offices and homes of the Unified Progressive Party, which holds six seats in South Korea's National Assembly.

Three members were arrested during the raids, and lawmaker Lee Seok-ki was later stripped of immunity and placed under arrest.

The NIS charged that members of the Unified Progressive Party were plotting rebellion, aiming to take up arms against the government in the event of war with North Korea.

This is a witch hunt launched by the ruling Saenuri Party of President Park Geun-hye and the National Intelligence Service to purge progressive voices from the political process.

Please read, circulate, and sign the following statement to call on the Park Geun-hye administration to stop its attack on democracy and express solidarity with the progressive and democratic forces in South Korea.

Send all endorsements by NO LATER THAN Wednesday September 25 to stop.nis@gmail.com.

- Please send organizational endorsements in the following format Organization name, city/state/country
- Please send individual endorsements in the following format Name, Organizational affiliation, city/state/country

For a critical analysis of the current situation in Korea – read Gregory Elich's Political Firestorm in South Korea, please click here:

http://www.4thmedia.org/2013/09/18/the-return-of-facist-repression-political-firestorm-in-south-korea/

For the Unified Progressive Party's response to the charges against it - please see the attached document.

Gregory Elich - Author of Strange Liberators: Militarism, Mayhem, and the Pursuit of Profit

Tim Shorrock - Author of Spies for Hire: The Secret World of Intelligence Outsourcing

STOP REPRESSION IN SOUTH KOREA!

Democracy in South Korea is under attack.

The ruling Saenuri Party of President Park Geun-hye and the National Intelligence Service have launched a witch hunt to purge progressive voices from the political process.

On August 28, the National Intelligence Service (NIS), formerly known as the Korean CIA, raided the offices and homes of the Unified Progressive Party, which holds six seats in South Korea's National Assembly.

Three members were arrested during the raids, and lawmaker Lee Seok-ki was later stripped of immunity and placed under arrest.

The NIS charged that members of the Unified Progressive Party were plotting rebellion, aiming to take up arms against the government in the event of war with North Korea.

The sole evidence for these outlandish claims was a transcript said to be taken from a surreptitious filming by an informer of two meetings held by the Unified Progressive Party in May.

Those arrested say that the NIS fabricated the words that it attributed to them, and an internal investigation by the Unified Progressive Party affirmed that the transcript excerpts the NIS leaked to the press did not correspond to what participants in the meetings heard being said.

The NIS, like its predecessor, the KCIA, has a long history of inventing and manipulating evidence in order to achieve its political aims.

In the last Korean election, it manipulated a transcript from former South Korean President Roh Moo-hyun's meetings with North Korean leader Kim Jong-il.

The changes made it appear that Roh intended to turn over South Korean territorial waters to the north. The intent was to paint the liberal and left opposition parties as disloyal and provide a boost to the campaigns of candidates belonging to the ruling party.

The NIS is once again fabricating evidence, this time in order to remove the Unified Progressive Party from the national scene.

Lee-Seok-ki and others face the prospect of imprisonment, and the NIS is considering adding the charge of aiding the enemy, which carries with it a potential death penalty.

The Unified Progressive Party spearheaded the ever-growing national protests against abuses by the NIS. Outrage has been mounting over interference by the NIS in the electoral process, and harassment and investigations against individuals for their politics, such as opponents of the Korean Free Trade Agreement.'

Protests increased in size and militancy, spreading throughout the nation.

The National Security Law, a remnant from the Japanese colonial period and the anticommunist Syngman Rhee regime in the years following the Second World War, is still in effect, and essentially makes it a crime to express thoughts that can be construed as "pro-North" or "pro-communist." When liberally interpreted, it has often been used to suppress dissent.

The National Security Law is the weapon of choice for the NIS. Clearly, the attack on the party aims to crush the calls to reform the NIS and provide bogus justification for its continued involvement in domestic affairs.

The ruling Saenuri Party is calling for Lee Seok-ki to be removed from office, even though he has yet to be tried, let alone convicted.

The Ministry of Justice has created a taskforce to look into responding to petitions by conservative groups to file a request with the Constitutional Court to dissolve the Unified Progressive Party.

The South Korean people suffered under many years of dictatorship and military rule. They won a hard-fought victory to bring democracy to their nation. The McCarthyist tactics of the Saenuri Party and the NIS threaten to undo that achievement. They cannot be allowed to destroy South Korea's democracy.

We, the undersigned, demand the Park Geun-hye administration-

- -Free Lee Seok-ki and other members of the Unified Progressive Party arrested under false charges.
- -Free members of the Beomminryeon unification organization, arrested in a raid by the NIS in June.
- -Halt the effort to remove Lee Seok-ki from office.
- -Stop the move to dissolve the Unified Progressive Party.
- -Abolish the National Security Law, instrument of repression.
- -Ban the National Intelligence Service from engaging in domestic surveillance and investigation of citizens.
- -Bring to justice those in the NIS who were responsible for interfering in the last election and in fabricating evidence.

The original source of this article is 4th Media Copyright © Global Research News, 4th Media, 2013

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Global Research

News

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca