

The Architects of Derivatives and Sub-Primes: Greenspan and Cox Confess

By Global Research

Global Research, October 23, 2008

George Washington's Blog 23 October 2008

Region: USA

Theme: Global Economy

Former Fed chair Alan Greenspan and SEC head Christopher Cox confessed their mistakes to Congress.

By way of background, Greenspan was a one of the main supporters of derivatives since at least 1999 (and see this). He was one of the main cheerleaders for subprime loans. And of course, he pushed “easy credit” with low interest rates.

The SEC has advocated no government oversight and “voluntarily regulation” by the companies themselves.

But today, they confessed. As an article in Market Watch says:

Three current and former financial regulators told Congress Thursday that they made fateful mistakes that helped drive the global financial system to the brink of disaster, and urged Congress to fill the regulatory gaps.

“We have learned that voluntary regulation does not work,” said Christopher Cox, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, in testimony on Thursday at the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee. “It was a fateful mistake” that no one was given the authority “to regulate investment bank holding companies other than on a voluntary basis.”

Former Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan . . . said, he and others are in “a state of shocked disbelief” that “counterparty surveillance” failed. He said he still doesn’t fully understand what went wrong.

Greenspan said he favored strengthening the regulatory structure. “As much as I would prefer it otherwise, in this financial environment I see no choice but to require that all securitizers retain a meaningful part of the securities they issue,” Greenspan said.

Greenspan’s admission might not sound very dramatic at first glance. But for a guy who is known for his cryptic mumblings and for rationalizing his own actions, this is his way of saying “we broke it, now someone’s got to fix it”.

The original source of this article is George Washington's Blog

Copyright © Global Research, George Washington's Blog, 2008

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Global Research

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca