A Common Tactic to Discredit Opponents Or to Create Momentum for “Regime Change”

The powers-that-be often use agent provocateurs to disrupt protests and paint protesters as violent and unlikeable.

For example, violent provocateurs were deployed:

- At the North American leader’s summit in Quebec (and see this)
- At the G20 protests in London
- In the Palestinian village of Bil’in
- In Cairo
- At the Occupy protests
- In Burma
- And in many other places

There is a related type of false flag operation commonly used to create chaos and discredit regimes or protesters: snipers.

For example:

- Unknown snipers reportedly killed both Venezuelan government and opposition protesters in the attempted 2002 coup
- Unknown snipers fired during Thailand’s 2010 protests
- Unknown snipers allegedly have created bedlam in Syria
- And the Estonian foreign minister claims that the new Ukrainian coalition deployed snipers to discredit the former government of Ukraine

Brutal ... but effective and cheap.

Because it doesn't cost much to hire one or a handful of snipers to access rooftops or bridge overpasses, create chaos, and then quietly disappear.
