

Trump's New National Security Adviser: A General with No Regard for Human Life

By Eric Sommer

Global Research, February 26, 2017

Region: USA

Theme: Crimes against Humanity, Militarization and WMD, US NATO War

Agenda

The appointment of Lt. Gen. H. R. McMaster as Trumps new national security adviser underscores the ever-growing power of the military and finance capital in the U.S. state. From wielding tremendous power from partially behind-the-scenes positions, these two sectors have emerged center stage in Trump's cabinet which is stocked with generals and billionaires.

Hailed almost universally by U.S. corporate media as a 'scholar-general', 'brilliant strategist', and the like, McMaster in reality represents the most extreme forms of militarist thinking, disregard for international law, and callous disregard for human life.

In his book 'Dereliction of Duty', also hailed as some kind of 'masterpiece' by corporate media, McMaster criticizes the U.S. military brass of the 1960's for not insisting that the administration of President Johnson send even more men, 700,000 is his number, to engage in the Vietnam war, and for not insisting that even more bombing of that country take place.

For younger readers who may lack detailed knowledge regarding the Vietnam war, the following facts need to be considered in assessing McMaster's bizzare view that the U.S.-state warfare under Johnson was 'inadequate'.

First of all, the U.S. troop strength in Vietnam was kept at about 500,00 (not enough for McMaster) for quite a few years; Fifty-thousand young American men died in the war, and far more were were injured or traumatized for life.

Secondly, the chemical poison called 'agent orange' was sprayed by U.S. forces over large swathes of the country to defoliate the rain forests, in order to better find and kill the Vietnamese defenders. This poison ultimately produced a large number – I think up to a million or more – deformed babies to be born to Vietnamese women.

Thirdly, 2 to 3 million Vietnamese were killed by the war, many of them by bombing. U.S. forces dropped more explosive power on Vietnam than the combined total of all world war II US. bombing (still not enough for McMaster).

Fourthly, the horrific consequences for young Americans who were drafted – i.e., ordered by the government to serve in the war – and for the Vietnamese people ultimately struck home for the American people. Tens of millions of American workers, young people, and others ultimately turned against the war, and the largest political demonstrations in U.S. history brought millions to demonstrate in Washington and in other U.S. cities.

This war crime, akin in its scale to the Nazi war crimes in Eastern Europe in WWII, is what McMaster views as inadequate or 'derelection of duty'. Moreover, McMaster's taste for large scale warfare has not slackened. Of late he has led a study in Eastern Europe on how best to engage in warfare against Russia, a nuclear armed power.

The reality that such an individual is now national security advisor to the president of the United States should serve as a stark warning that preparations to drag the American people into yet more wars, and to impose militaristic authoritarian controls on the country, are afoot.

The original source of this article is Global Research Copyright © Eric Sommer, Global Research, 2017

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Eric Sommer

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

 $For media inquiries: {\color{blue} \underline{publications@globalresearch.ca}}$