UPDATE

Global Research Editor's note

Moazzam Begg was refused access to a London Toronto Air Canada flight following a request by Canada's High Commission in London to Air Canada: so much for freedom of expression. Begg was travelling on a British passport.

The Canadian government is involved in suppressing analysis and debate on detention and torture at Guantanamo.

Moazzam Begg on Guantanamo Bay

Talk and Discussion

Tuesday, May 24th, 7pm

School of Community and Public Affairs
2149 Mackay, Montreal

(Guy-Concordia metro)

Free event! (Donations to cover costs of event welcome.)

We regret that the location is not wheel-chair accessible.
Childcare available on 48-hour advance notice.

Moazzem Begg will speak in English; whisper translation to French available.

London-based Moazzam Begg is the director of the British human rights organization Cage prisoners. He was held in Guantánamo Bay for two years and in Bagram for one year between 2002 and 2005. In January 2005, he was released without charge, without explanation, without compensation and has since been living and working in England.

As a former cell-mate of Omar Khadr, Begg was featured in the recent film You don't like the truth: 4 days inside Guantanamo.
