An undercover cop in Oakland pulled out a gun and pointed it at protesters Wednesday night after they exposed him and a partner as police officers attempting to incite crime.

The shocking moment was captured by Reuters photographer Noah Berger, who was covering protests spurred by the Michael Brown and Eric Garner cases.

Reports indicate that two police officers were posing as protesters, while wearing bandanas over their faces. Others in the group cottoned on to the fact that they were not legitimate demonstrators and began pointing at them and yelling, "Hey, they're undercover, they're cops!"

The two cops attempted to break off from the group, but were followed. A legitimate protester attempted to remove one of the cops' balaclavas, and one of the officers pushed a protester, causing a scuffle to break out.

One of the officers slammed the protester to the ground, and handcuffed him, riling up the crowd. The second officer then pulled out a concealed weapon and waved it around telling protesters to back off, before scores of uniformed back up cops arrived on the scene.

Protesters say that the officers were banging on windows and shouting inflammatory statements. One protester claims to have a video of the officers doing just this, but has not yet posted it Later commenting on the incident, Oakland police Lt. Chris Bolton revealed that the cops were from an “outside” agency and that he would investigate the claims of them acting as agent provocateurs.

@Grlyflynn @CourtneyPFB @marymad Got it. Will not post anything of arrest. Partner is on the ground – I have not yet seen what’s on video. — Morpheus Ravenna (@MorpheusRavenna) December 11, 2014

The #OaklandProtest pictured man isn’t an OPD officer & not an OPD arrest. OPD 1st responded to scene on report from other agency. 1/1 — Lt. Chris Bolton (@OPDChris) December 11, 2014

#OaklandProtests If allegation officers incited crime, crowd source video &

provide a link so I may forward. Obviously troubling.

Bolton later stated that the officers were with the California Highway Patrol.
