Ilana Rachel Daniel, health advisor and politician, talked about Israel's green passport that essentially creates a second citizenry, "a true medical apartheid, disallowing healthy law-abiding taxpaying citizens from entering their places of culture if they do not participate in this experiment."

"They're making this green passport where half the population cannot get into theaters or malls or all sorts of things unless you have taken the vaccination. They are creating a medical Apartheid,"

Part of a program dubbed Operation Back to Life , the "Green Pass" system restricts entry to registered gyms, theaters, hotels, restaurants, universities and secondary schools to holders of scannable vaccine passport only.
